This Place Matters Community Challenge

The National Trust for Historic Preservation has created a This Place Matters Community Challenge to help non-profit organizations across the country start a conversation about places that matter in the communities that they work in.

The more support each organization gets for their participation, the more opportunity they have to spark a preservation movement in their community, and inspire more people to embrace preservation and historic places that matter.

Main Street Beatrice has registered the Carnegie Restoration Project for the "This Place Matters" community challenge! Vote daily to show your support of this important historic building in downtown Beatrice. Voting runs through Sept. 15. If we win, Main Street Beatrice will receive $25,000 to go towards continued restoration efforts of the Carnegie building.

To vote, visit http://my.preservationa-tion.org/site/PageNavigator/TPM_CC_Map. Select the Carnegie Restoration Project from the map. Winners will be announced on Sept. 15.
